Karat interview for Citi Bank

Interview Prep

Hi all,

Has anyone given interview for Citi with Karat?

I only know its a 1 hour interview. It is for a Senior Java Developer role at Citi Bank London location.

Is it purely coding or mix of coding & technical questions?

Please let me know what to expect.

Thanks

My interview experience was not good. This is the first time I gave Karat interview. There were 5 Java/Spring related questions at the start.

1. Pros & cons of checked exception
2. Effectively final
3. Use of Spring

was timestamp should be in float so you have to convert String to float. I didnt get time to write the implementation for the next question which was related to no of complete journeys done. I could just explain my approach.

Overall, I didnt like the interview format. Its too much cramped in 1 hour.

Hey can you pls tell how was the environment? Like the coding environment.. I am kinda scared what if I get confused there like they give the whole code and then you have to paste in different files?? And then implement the method? Can we check it by running it multiple times? It would be helpful if you can explain in little detail like how you solved it.. also I heard it do have IDE suggestions so it's difficult.. please I have karat in few days same role as your for Java/spring

I recently completed a Karat technical interview as part of a hiring process. From a technical perspective, the interview itself was well structured and the interviewer was professional. The discussion covered areas such as SQL, scripting, and domain-related topics, and overall the technical interaction felt constructive. During the coding portion I explained my approach and the interviewer appeared to understand the solution walkthrough.

However, after the interview I was informed that my application could not proceed because an "integrity risk" was flagged during the session. From what I understand, this flag was triggered by automated monitoring signals rather than direct feedback from the interviewer. Unfortunately, candidates are not able to review the recording or receive

During the interview my setup consisted of a single external monitor with a webcam attached, connected to my laptop with the laptop display turned off so that the external monitor served as the primary screen. I had one browser open with two tabs — one for the interview session and another for Karat Studio, which opened as part of the assessment for coding tasks. I switched between these two tabs while performing the coding exercise and interacting with the interviewer.

The most challenging part of the experience was not being able to understand what specific behavior or signal triggered the automated integrity flag. Without that information it can be difficult for candidates to understand what might have gone wrong.

Overall the technical interview itself was fair and professionally conducted, but clearer transparency around automated integrity monitoring could help candidates better understand the outcome of their assessment.

I recently did mine, they asked me a few questions on React like mostly process oriented like diff between useReducer/useState. Coding round consisted of fixing failing unit tests and an algorithm question

Virtual-Sir-6034 • 4mo ago

What was the algorithm question they asked and test cases was related to Thor conversion ?

Any one recently given karat interview for java in citi ?

Create

code, explain it, then suggestions to improve it. Then moved into coding assessment. It was an account manager for a Credit and Debit card. first issue was a small bug that i fixed in minutes. Second issue was getting averages , which i solved in about 15 minutes, only had about 15 minutes to solve the last one but got a loose algorithm explanation and got timed out. Felt pretty strong about it at the end, but guess I didnt hit the bar.
